Origins

The Adventist message came to the state of Chiapas, to the city of Tuxtla Gutiérrez, from Oaxaca in 1913. According to Antonio Díaz, longstanding church elder, the first missionaries came to the territory of the North Chiapas Conference in 1938.

The Adventist message came to Tapilula, another city in the north of Chiapas, through Saturnino Silván, who came to Tapilula in 1943. He settled in the community as a practicing doctor and teacher. He was established in a house that served as both his medical office and a school. He taught the children to read by using the Bible. By the 1950's, he had a group of 60 persons who soon purchased the property where the current central church is located in the center of the city of Tapilula. In the 1960's there was a growth of membership, and by 1972 there were 130 believers.⁴ Since then the church has grown greatly, and the message has gone out to almost every corner of our territory.

Formative Events

At the administrative board meeting of the South Mexican Union, presided over by Pastor Agustín Galicia, president of the union, in Mexico City on September 2 of 1987, by vote number 1075, a request was sent to the Inter-American Division to consider dividing the South Mexican Conference into two fields.⁵

In 1988 the South Mexican Union Conference, with vote number 1638, decided to advance the South Mexican Conference $50,000,000.00 pesos (MXN) to build offices for the North Chiapas Mission, which was in the process of organizing.⁶

In this way, in 1989, the South Mexican Conference divided into two fields, the Central Chiapas Conference, which would care for the territory in the center of the state and have its headquarters in Tuxtla Gutiérrez with 55 churches and 29,352 members, and the North Chiapas Conference, headquartered in Pichucalco, with 66 churches and 39,729 members.⁷

The North Chiapas Conference located its offices at 12 Andrés Serra Rojas Street, Las Ranas colony, Pichucalco, Chiapas, 29520, and was officially formed in 1989.⁸

Because of its growth, the North Chiapas Conference has been divided several times in order to form new missions. At the administrative board meeting in Pichucalco, Chiapas, on February 17, 2005, presided over by Pastor Ignacio Navarro Pérez, the conference, by vote number 3258, ceded the districts of Huitiupán, Sabanilla, Simojovel, and Yajalón to the new Upper Chiapas Mission, which would have its headquarters in San Cristóbal de las Casa; it had a total of four districts, 19 churches, 113 congregations, and 9,889 members.⁹

In 2007 the administrative board of the North Chiapas Conference met in Pichucalco on June 19. The meetings were presided over by Pastor Dimas López, and with vote number 3746, the conference ceded the districts of Agua Blanca, CNC, Xochitlán, Raudales 1, Raudales 2, and Santos Degollados to the new West Chiapas Mission, with headquarters in Tuxtla Gutiérrez.¹⁰

The third and most recent division of territory for the North Chiapas Conference took place with the creation of the Palenque Mission A. The criteria for its organization was voted in plenary session of the Chiapas Mexican Union on November 14-16 of 2016.¹¹ At the constituency meeting of the North Chiapas Conference, which met in Pichucalco, Chiapas, on March 20, 2016 with 149 regular member and 92 ex officio members, by vote number 419, it was decided to cede the districts of Nuevo Chihuahua, Benemérito, Palestina, Chancala, La Siria, Palenque 1, Palenque 2, Palenque 3, Playas de Catzajá, El Limar, and Nuevo Limar to the new Palenque Mission A.¹²

Fulfilling the Mission

The North Chiapas Conference seeks to fulfill its mission by:

Seeing that all its members experience a personal relationship with Christ and be saved living under His control. The conference is trying to make sure all its departments permeate their activities with the program “Lord, Transform me,” through the systematic reading of the Bible and through the reading of the Spirit of Prophecy with the program “Believe in His Prophets.”

Committing the church to adopt a lifestyle that will glorify God by implementing the program: “I Want to Live Healthy,” and +Health, so that the members of the church and of the community can live with healthy habits.

Making the presence of the church known throughout the community at all social levels through community services, such as the medical brigades, which involve health professionals and the youth clubs of the church in carrying out this work.

Implementation of an integral evangelistic program, which involves all the church members in the personal and corporate evangelistic projects according to each member’s gifts and talents. All 41 districts of the conference will participate in this.

Strengthening the faith of the children of the church members through the Adventist educational system, which can also evangelize its non-Adventist students and families.

Through the plan Sueña Grande, which seeks to involve a larger number of members as colporteurs who can carry out evangelistic work in the territory of the conference through the selling of Adventist literature.
